Casa Colina Centers for Rehabilitation, with the support of people in this community, has dedicated itself for more than 70 years to medical recovery and rehabilitation of people with many types of disabling conditions – polio, brain injury, spinal cord injury, stroke, amputation, and many more. We recognized that we had a special mission in relation to the military personnel returning from the battlefields of Iraq and Afghanistan and fire fighters and police officers with serious brain injuries and other catastrophic injuries, because we had already developed special expertise in these areas. Therefore, we welcomed many of these brave people for care at Casa Colina without compromise, whether or not every part of their rehabilitation would be paid for.

About Casa Colina Centers for Rehabilitation

Casa Colina began in 1936 in Chino under the leadership of its founder Frances Eleanor "Mother" Smith and neighboring physicians to provide rehabilitative care to children recovering from polio. Polio was at epidemic proportions and by the 1950s plans were developed to build a new hospital in Pomona where children could be cared for by experienced medical professionals. By 1960, when the new hospital was completed, the new polio vaccine had wiped out the disease. Casa Colina refocused its medical and physical rehabilitation services to concentrate on treating people of all ages and disabilities. In the last decade, it has rebuilt and renovated its entire 20-acre Pomona campus to include a state of the art rehabilitation hospital, outpatient center, transitional living center, children's center, adult day health care, imaging, surgery center and other specialized services treating 10,000 people a year.
